CAMPAGNA MOTORS, the maker of the renowned three wheel vehicles T-REX and V13R is announcing it has reached an agreement to buy back the inventory of the old T-REX company from its creditor, MERCANTILE FINANCE.

This agreement puts an end to all legal proceedings over ownership of anything related to the T-REX and allows CAMPAGNA MOTORS to benefit from the entire inventory, work in progress etc. of the previous manufacturing company.

“This agreement allows us to start where things were left off last year during the restructuring of T-REX”; says André Morissette, President of CAMPAGNA MOTORS. “We also gained access to a lot of older parts for previous years models that are difficult to replicate; this will significantly improve our ability to serve our customers in a timely manner.”

David Neault, Vice-President of CAMPAGNA MOTORS added “The completion of this transaction will expedite the setup of the new manufacturing plant in Boucherville. To be able to benefit from the past; to gain access to all the records, the inventory of new and older parts is going to have a significant impact on our clientele. We are very proud that we were able to keep the organization in Québec, and that from our new Headquarters, we will take on the world”

The company plans to be able to deliver its first vehicles by the end of September. The production will be ramped up over the next months to be able to produce 300 vehicles in 2009.

To date, more than 3M$ has been invested; more than 5M$ will be needed to complete the buildup and setup of the organization. “There is no reason why this company cannot become the Ferrari made in Québec” says Mr. Morissette. “The products that we manufacture have a world-wide appeal. We have demand from all regions of the globe and will be establishing a strategy to grow our business with consistence, profitability and quality. We have a very long term vision for developing this organization into a World Wide Manufacturer and we are confident that we have all the necessary ingredients to realize that vision”
